

Take a walk through OUR DOORS

Whether you need extra privacy, streaming light, or something in between, the type of doors you choose for your home can make a big difference to the way you live.

French doors

The French door is a classic look that's been used in homes for centuries, and for good reason. With glass panelling and a double-door design, they offer a picture-book view of the outside world. Opening either outwards or inwards, they are typically used between living areas and outdoor spaces. They're flexible, easy to use and add a stylish touch to your home.

Hinged doors

Hinged doors are one of the most popular and versatile forms of doors. They're particularly suited to areas that need to be shut off from the rest of the home - like laundries and bathrooms. The glazing used in hinged doors can be obscured if required, to offer privacy, while still letting light through.

fold

Bi-fold doors

To truly experience the benefits of indoor/outdoor living, consider bi-fold doors. Bi-folds allow you to open up an entire space in seconds, providing a seamless flow between your home and the outside environment. They're perfect for entertaining, watching the outside world from the comfort of your home, and bringing in air and light. Freefold bi-fold doors maximise opening space even further. The door folds right around to sit flush with the exterior wall, optimising your view and your living space.

Sliding and stacking doors

stack

With a sliding or stacking door, you can take full advantage of your outdoor surroundings - whether it's a beautiful view of nature, or watching the kids play in the backyard. The standard slider has two panels (one slides behind a fixed panel), while stackers have two or more panels opening and stacking behind a fixed panel. Sliders are great for ventilating your home - you can keep them just partially open if it's wet or windy. And because there's no clearance required (compared with conventional doors that open outwards or inwards), you'll free up extra space too.
